

SCHEELE HANGED.

Died Without a Struggle on the Gallows at Bridgeport.

Played Pinochle All Night Before His Execution.

The Man Who Shot a Constable from an Upper Window.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 17.—Jacob Scheele, the aged German convicted of the murder of Constable Louis Drucker at New Canaan, Jan. 25, 1888, was hanged here today, the drop falling at 10.30.

Scheele spent his last night on earth apparently as unconcerned as his approaching doom as he had shown weeks before.

He talked and laughed with his guards and spent the greater portion of the time playing his favorite game of cards, pinochle.

For supper the condemned man partook of eggs on toast, rolls and butter, strawberries, cream and cake. He drank several cups of coffee and also some beer, of which he was passionately fond.

Rev. Mr. Warner, his spiritual adviser, remained with him an hour.

Scheele then requested Sheriff Clarkson not to allow any one else to visit him during the night, as he wished to enjoy his final hours and did not want to be disturbed.

Scheele won most of the games, which made him good-natured and contented.

At 1.30 o'clock the condemned man finished playing cards, but he remained up until 2.30 when he sought his couch, and twenty minutes later he was in a deep slumber in which he remained until after daylight.

This is the story of Scheele's crime: "New Canaan was a 'no license' town and a law and order league had been formed to secure the enforcement of the law. Among other who had been prosecuted for selling liquor was Scheele, and upon the day of the crime, when Constable Drucker went to the house of the German saloon-keeper the latter had barricaded his door, refusing to admit the constable.

Drucker then went back to the center of the village and procured assistance. When he and his men arrived at the house again they proceeded to break down the door.

When Drucker was within twenty feet of the house there was a flash, a loud report, and the constable was hurled up his hands, exclaiming: "Brant, I'm shot."

These words were said to William Brant, who accompanied Drucker, and they were the last ever uttered by him. Death followed immediately after.

Scheele had shot from a window of an upper room, where he had taken refuge. He immediately after wounded himself in the head with a pistol, and was kept under guard at his house for several days while suffering from this wound.

Last night he expressed sorrow for his deed and said: "God knows it was unpardonable." Scheele died without a struggle when the drop fell.

ONLY THE CAT CREMATED.

Dangerous Fire in a Grand Street Millinery Store.

A fire attended with some strange circumstances occurred early this morning at 365 Grand street.

The building is owned by James C. Cunningham, of Morrisania, who leases it to W. H. Griffin, whose fancy goods store at 337 Grand street, two blocks from the scene of this morning's blaze, was on fire Tuesday night.

Griffin sublet the place sixteen months ago to Feltenstein & Goldfarb, who conduct a millinery bazaar. The store floor extends back the length of the lot, 100 feet. Partner Goldfarb's family lived over the store.

The Goldfarbs were away from home last night. Their servant was also out, and a cat was the only living thing in the house.

The flames started at 8.45 this morning in some mysterious way in the rear part of Feltenstein & Goldfarb's bazaar. The buildings on either side are ramshackle affairs and were threatened with destruction.

No. 303 is occupied by John Nelson, a harness-maker, who lives upstairs with his family. They were driven into the street in their night-dresses.

The flames enveloped the rear of Nelson's building, and it burned for some time. They could give no explanation of the cause of the fire, but claimed to have carried a stock worth $8,000 to $10,000. They are insured for $3,000, it is said.

They left after looking over the place and told the insurance patrolman in charge of the building that they were going uptown to get their papers.

The police put the loss at $4,000 on stock and $4,000 on building. The fire was extinguished at 9.15.

One of the girls who worked in the place fainting when she came along this morning and saw there had been a fire.

W. H. Griffin, the lessee of the building, seems to be unfortunate. His store at 337 Grand street was twice afire in three days.

COL. SEIFERT'S SON SHOT.

A Gun Accidentally Discharged and the Ball Pierced His Skull.

News of the accidental shooting of E. C. Seifert, the fourteen-year-old son of Col. A. E. Seifert, Secretary of the Brewers' Exchange, who lives at 10 West Ninetieth street, was received this morning.

Young Seifert has been boarding at Cairo, Greene County. With another boy, he went hunting and fishing yesterday. While standing on a rock in the middle of a small stream, the gun was discharged—a .22-caliber rifle—and the ball pierced his skull just over the left eye.

The bullet has not yet been extracted, and the young Seifert will probably die.

CITY AND STATE POLITICS.

Tammany Fears of a Labor Combination for Legislative Seats.

John J. Scannell Said to Be Slated to Succeed Gen. Spinola.

Tammany Hall leaders are said to be alarmed at the organization's prospective loss in its legislative representation. In the last Legislature, Tammany had five of the seven seats, and controlled twenty-two of the twenty-four Assemblymen from this city.

Dunklepiel, who was elected a county Democrat, joined Tammany Hall afterwards, and Kerrigan, a Voorhisite, was elected by a combination with Tammany.

The labor element thinks it sees in the recently developed opposition to the Wigwam an opportunity to secure several seats in the twenty-four Assemblymen from this city.

The labor unions figure that Tammany is in the minority of the voting population. There are 200,000 voters in the city and Tammany has never polled more than 115,000.

This number is not evenly distributed over the city, and where Tammany is weakest there will effort be concentrated to unite all the opposition against it.

In return for the endorsement of its candidates in certain districts, the labor party, it is said, will agree to cast its strength with the Tammany opposition in other districts.

By doing it, it is reckoned on to defeat the Tammany candidates in the Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Twentieth and Twenty-first Assembly Districts, and possibly in the First, Nineteenth, Twenty-second and Twenty-third Districts.

Similar conditions of anti-Tammany elements are expected in the Senate Districts, and the Tammany candidates in the Assembly will have to make a desperate fight, and it will suffer defeat in the Fifth, Sixth, Seventh and Eighth Districts. The Tammany is well known, are closely allied, professionally and personally, with the labor leaders.

OFFERS GILROY THE AQUEDUCT.

The Board May Yield to the Public Works Department.

Commissioner Gilroy to day received a request from the Aqueduct Commissioners to be ready, if necessary, to take charge of the work of operating the new Aqueduct.

Commissioner Gilroy objects to satisfying the pay rolls for employees of the Aqueduct Commissioners engaged in operating the Aqueduct. He claims that it is no part of the Aqueduct's duty to maintain or operate the Aqueduct, but only to build it.

The Aqueduct is now supplying the city with water, and the city is now paying for its operation and maintenance. The Aqueduct is now a public utility, and it is necessary that this supply should be maintained. Commissioner Gilroy has referred the matter to the Chief Engineer Birdsell for a report.

Will Head an Anti-Tammany Brigade.

William ("Fatty") Grote has announced that he will be in the field next Fall with a strong anti-Tammany army. Grote is an ex-Alderman from the Twelfth, where he conducted a saloon, and was defeated by Tammany last Fall, but when Patrick Keenan was coaxed into the Wigwam Grote did not to be driven out as one of the conditions of Keenan's entry. The result is said to be that he is very bitter towards the Tammany leaders, and will join his forces with the Steinkers.

Scannell to Sit in Spinola's Seat.

Richard Croker and Henry D. Purroy are in Saratoga, guests at the cottage of John J. Scannell, the Tammany leader in the Eleventh District. This has revived the rumor that Scannell will be a candidate for Congress to succeed the late Gen. Spinola.

Protest Against Gibbs to Night.

At tonight's meeting of the Republican County Committee, in Grand Opera-House Hall, the protest against seating the Gibbs delegation from the Thirtieth Assembly District will be presented.

A Republican Leader in the Sixteenth.

William Henkel, who was the Republican candidate for a seat in the sixteenth district, has been selected leader of the Republican organization in that district, to succeed Richard M. Lush, who was rendered ineligible by his appointment as City Marshal.

Peffer to Speak in New York.

United States Senator Peffer, of Kansas, will speak at the meeting of the Third Party movement at Cooper Union Hall next Tuesday evening. Robert Blissert will preside.

Secession from the Counties.

A new political organization, composed of former members of the County Democracy disaffected with the leadership of Judge Coulter, has been organized in the Seventeenth Assembly District. It will be known as the John J. Fitzpatrick County Democracy. Frank G. Goodrich is President of the new organization, Thomas C. Kinney is Treasurer and Wm. J. Fitzpatrick Secretary.

THIS PATRIARCH A SUICIDE.

The Old Man Who Shot Himself and Fell Into the River Identified.

Several persons visited the Morgue this morning, to view the body of the old man who was found floating in the Sound yesterday, at Fort Morris, by Charles McTierney, of One Hundred and Thirty-ninth street and Locust street.

Nobody identified the dead man, who was William Crozier, of 632 East 144th street, identified him as John J. Lush, a silk finisher. He unquestionably committed suicide at the edge of the wharf by shooting himself in the head just above the right ear, after which he toppled and fell into the water.

He is about sixty-five years old, with long gray hair and a flowing white beard.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

DEPEW ORDERS WORK BEGUN.

Sections of the Tunnel Chosen for Ventilation Experiments.

State Board's Plan for Carrying off All Smoke and Cinders.

President Chauncey M. Depew, of the New York Central Railroad, has given orders to begin at once on the experiments directed by the State Board of Railroad Commissioners for the ventilation of the tunnel under Fourth avenue.

By Mr. Depew's instructions, issued after a conference with the officers of the Grand Central Station, the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad and the Railroad Commissioners, are that the section of the tunnel between the station and the city hall will be the first to be ventilated.

Miss Rose Coghlan received so much praise for her impersonation of Rosalind in Castle Stevens' "As You Like It" that she will probably add this play to her repertoire. It had been so long since Miss Coghlan had appeared as the vivacious and winsome maiden, so that her performance was partly experimental. Its success was partly experimental, and the performance at Castle Stevens may have its effect upon next season.

Miss Coghlan is still summing up at Fort Hamilton with her mother, she has a berth engaged upon a steamer sailing for Europe next Wednesday week.

James L. Edwards, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

GOSSIP OF THE STAGE WORLD.

Rose Coghlan May Add "As You Like It" to Her Repertoire.

A Tragic Coincidence in the Leading Part of "Paul Kaurav."

Miss Rose Coghlan received so much praise for her impersonation of Rosalind in Castle Stevens' "As You Like It" that she will probably add this play to her repertoire. It had been so long since Miss Coghlan had appeared as the vivacious and winsome maiden, so that her performance was partly experimental. Its success was partly experimental, and the performance at Castle Stevens may have its effect upon next season.

Miss Coghlan is still summing up at Fort Hamilton with her mother, she has a berth engaged upon a steamer sailing for Europe next Wednesday week.

James L. Edwards, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is probably the case.

Edward J. Fournier, the actor who died from the effects of morphine in Chicago Sunday, was engaged to play the leading part in "Paul Kaurav" next season. His predecessor in the role was Henry Avenue, whose tragic death from morphine a few months ago will be remembered.

"A Turkish Bath" is the fascinating title of one of those hybrid entertainments known as farce-comedies. It will probably be intensely refined, for it is in three acts—a dip, a sweat and a plunge. It is also said to be the "cleanest comedy on the road," which pretty much is